

Some people think it would be a good idea for schools to teach every young person how to be a good parent. Do you agree or disagree with this opinion? Describe the skills a person needs to be a good parent.

From the arrival of humans on the Earth, parenting and rearing children have been an important issue for parents and it has become more complicated matter for them and the education system today. In modern life, schools play a considerable role in teaching sciences, morals and how to behave as polite and conscientious persons in society. Although all parents are the first role model for their children, it is a fact that schools also have significant effect on them. Whereas, parenting is the hardest task to do that has direct impact on society, it would be better that there would be some courses to teach adults how to be a proper parents at high school.

It is obvious that young adults are-achieved the basic points of parenting by their parents from their home where is the first place they can see. Even if their parents unintentionally have shown a wrong behavior, they cannot prevent their children from doing the same. Psychologists say that mothers' and fathers' acts are more substantial than their saying, so it is becoming difficult for schools to retrain all the all wrongs and inappropriate behaviors which students learnt. There is a necessity for offspring to learn how to appreciate to elderly and also others, avoid lying, being patient, hardworking and faithful for their future parenting.

Those who had experienced bad parenting always have had a lot of issues in every aspect of their life such as making decisions, lack of confidence, being cruel and aggressive, having lack of hope and maybe, they feel that they are not valuable enough to live a life like different parts of society. There is an exact duty for schools' authorities to instruct adults self- knowledge through holding specific courses and offer them read the book called " I am ok, You are ok" written by Harris, Thomas Antony to know ~~their own~~themselves properly.

To sum up all the statements above, I have to say, it is undeniable that both parents and the education system should work together to bring up well-mannered nations and healthy community. Moreover, there is a key point that says, not only acts of maternity and paternity are extremely effective alone, but also may affect their children's achievements from school.