

Some people believe that university students should be required to attend classes. Others believe that going to classes should be optional for students. Which point of view do you agree with? Use specific reasons and details to explain your answer.

It has been a long time that attending to classes has introduced itself as an irrevocable prerequisite of educating process which needs to be met by every single student. However, there are many opponents, particularly amongst students, who prefer to leave the choice of going to classes to students themselves. As far as I am concerned, we must to further the educating systems by striking a balance here.

Undoubtedly, there are many acquisitions in physical presence in classes like taking advantage of easy learning from the people who spend their very time studying a special issue. Almost all of the students have been engaged with reading those contiguous materials ages of time while they were easily understandable through the teachers talk. Consequently, this access to lecturers enables students to make communications with either teachers and their peers which not only hones their debate skills but also expands their social networks. Prima facie all of it will equip students to start their next journey in life; jobs.

But the flip side of the coin leads us to face the priceless time which wastes in this method. I can count dozens of teachers whom I found inferior than the average of classes in term knowledge and even disposition unfortunately, by which I mean there is nothing to learn in such classes. Moreover, it is time to get more acquainted with the nature of university. Although it represents itself as a step after schools, it shares a disparate sprit totally with them. In a way that the whole system is designed to gradually saturate the role of supervising instead of teaching and encourage students seeking knowledge nor to imbibe them with passive information flowing out of teachers' mouth. Above all, I personally have found voluntary classes more populated than those of mandatory ones.

To put it in a nutshell, maybe it is necessary to observe newcomers as school students in universities but the schooling atmosphere should give its place to the university s' step by step, assuming that students are matured enough to be able handling their educating and if not they should learn this rather than vastly available materials on other media like books, articles and even lectures on the internet.
