

Some people think that it's best to encourage children to leave family home as soon as possible. Others believe children should stay at their family home for as long as they like. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

While many believe that it is to the benefit of children to move out of their parents' home as soon as they can, others, however, argue that a minimum requirements is needed to be met if a child decides to live on his own, and besides this controversial topic another major question has been raised among people from different social strata as to that up to what age children can live with their parents. When it comes to this notion I hold the idea that moving out of our parents' home is a significant decision that depends on a variety of factors. without a deep study individuals are not able to make an informed choice.

Our family shelter is considered the first and the most memorable place everyone can experience during his their life, hence the importance of leaving it at the right time. Those who hold the idea of leaving this secure place reason that the sooner the children move out, the sooner they find their journey ifof life. They maintain that gone are the days that the members of a family could spend a lot of time with each other enjoying one another's companionship. In this day and age, individuals have to find their own way as soon as they can to shoulder the burden of their duties.

On the other hand, an overwhelming majority of people strongly hold the idea that leaving parents' house could be beneficial to both parents and children if only a certain conditions are met. They argue that not only is does mental maturity plays a pivotal role, but children also have to be fully stand on their own feet from a financial point of view. Many a child who leaves his family to live by himself, but returns after a while with irreparable emotional damages.

To cut a long story short, I believe that perhaps leaving our parents under certain conditions can have a lot of merits, but bear in mind that undoubtedly, leaving our dearest ones is a deceptively simple idea, so a wide range of criteria must be taken into account so that one can make an informed choice. Arguably, this separation can results in a variety of changes in our social and individual life that if these variations are overlooked, can lead us to serious emotional and financial a mess.
