

Many young people today are too worried about the way they look and this causes a problem. Do you agree or disagree?

We are living in a modern society in which appearance has become one of the most important things to care about, especially for the young. Many teenagers, today, try to get dressed and behave like a standard model ~~introducing~~ introduced by the celebrities and the mainstream magazines. It seems it is necessary to be flawless in society which judges you by the way you look.

Young people get the idea that they ought to follow a world trend. They try to be in shape by following a strict diet which may consequently develop serious eating disorders. They even undergo ~~the~~ unnecessary cosmetic surgeries trying to be perfect. They spare no effort to keep up with the fashion otherwise they feel left out and depressed. It is actually a symptom of lack of self confidence among the new generation, particularly among the girls.

On the other hand, from ~~the~~ a physiological point it is inevitable due to the identity crisis related to puberty that is not a new ~~phenomenal~~ phenomenon. Every juveniles regardless of ~~their~~ his generation seeks s to get to know ~~themselves~~ himself better. The confused adolescents are too worried about what they wear and try different styles s to gradually find a character they fit in with. Besides, to be honest appearance plays an important role in the first impression on ~~the~~ certain occasions like ~~the~~ meetings, job interviews s or interacting with ~~the~~ clients.

To sum up, spending too much time in the shopping malls instead of attending sport or art classes will make a shallow generation. however, consider that it can be just a ~~faze~~ phase which is part of their character development.
