

Some people say that E-books and modern technology will totally replace traditional newspapers and magazines. to what extent do you agree or disagree.

Today, in the technological cutting-edge era, all human activities have been overshadowed by the internet in that rarely can you find a person without using a technological device. I think that although technology has made human life easier, traditional newspapers and magazines also are used by people and up to now technology cannot replace it and that does not seem possible in the future.

First of all, over ~~the~~-time individuals especially elder people have habited to read newspapers. Moreover, the gesture of reading newspapers induces them the feeling of ~~omniscient~~omniscience. Also, traditional newspapers and magazines are more portable than their online counterparts. ~~Ironically~~however, ~~a~~-the paper that is required for producing ~~of~~-newspapers and magazines have some irreversible effect environmentally which can give rise to over logging and even deforestation.

On the other hand, there is no doubt that modern technology and the internet have made information readily available so that news is being updated almost every day. In addition, most of the information on the internet is free and everyone who owns a laptop or computer can access ~~to~~-it whenever they want, and gone are the days that students had to go to libraries and book stores to find their resources.

To put it in ~~the~~-a nutshell, I personally opine that although E-books and online news have made the traditional ones less significant and roughly all of the people spend most of their time on the internet, the printed books and newspapers are still popular ~~yet~~ and technology could not make them redundant.
