Young people nowadays do not give enough time to helping their communities.-

Today, the young generation is facing more criticism of their contribution to the society. Old people define them as a lazy and selfish generation. However, I strongly oppose this idea that young individuals are apathetic. In the following paragraphs, I will explain why this generation can be considered as helpful as previous generations.

To begin with, according to developments and technology, many of the tasks are not done by own people. In view of technology, the appliances have developed, so most of the manual work is done by the devices such as a vacuum cleaner. Therefore, homes ~~require-need~~ children's-need less than before. In addition, many organizations have been established providing a various services which can be helpful for the families. For instance, the decades ago, people themselves took care of the aged people, but today we witness ~~developing-development of~~ the retirement houses which can nurse elderly people. This method has edge over the old way. In fact, old people are in the care of individuals who are educated ~~at-~~ in this field like doctors, psychologists, and nurses.

Moreover, I opine that younger people prefer helping society instead of one person. We can take the student charities as an example. Many of these charities have been recently established. ~~In these charities, where~~ they labor to educate the adolescents having fallen behind in order to be a promising person in the ~~new-near~~ future. In other words, many of them do believe in this expression "give a man fish and you feed him; show him how to catch fish and you feed him for a lifetime." In that case, It seems they take sensible actions rather than emotional ones.

To conclude, I guess we cannot claim that the young generation considers itself less effective members than the previous ~~onesgenerations~~. Since they are more educated and creative, they have decided to change the way they can help their communities and the less fortunate. To put it simply, we cannot compare generations' sympathy with each other, because the world keeps changing and each of them makes up their own mind about how to be worthwhile according to the circumstances.
