Some people say that it is possible to tell a lot about a person's culture and character from their choice of clothes.

Do you agree or disagree?

Give reasons for your answer and include any relevant examples from your own knowledge or experience.

Some people are of the opinion that it is conceivable to describe and recognize a person's culture and character from their choice of clothing. I believe that the way of somebody's dressing attire/garment tells a lot about them, although I do not totally agree with this viewpoint.

Special dressing reveals so many things about the person's character. For example, if you always wear a brand-new dress or luxury one, which is-are extremely expensive, it shows that you care a lot about your appearance and chicness. Moreover, it symbolizes of money and wealth due to the fact it is feasible for you to recognize their culture and character according to many. Accordinglyhowever, by that scale, wearing expensive and classy dresses does not mean that you are amongst educated and respectable people's category.

On the other hand, I-think wearing particular clothing can be a rule or law of a country that you have to obey in this regard. You should not judge and assess people's personality and culture just by kind of their clothing. As a proof, I wear a scarf and manteeau despite myself, or many women put on chador by force of their country's law or their workplace's. Hence, you cannot discern people's culture and personage-true nature by the choice of their clothing.

In conclusion, as long as your style and the way of dressing manifest your character and personality, you can inaccurately surmise the civility of a person. Nevertheless, due to the basic rule in every country like ours you cannot predict a person's character and culture by choice of their clothes with any certainty. Because of that, I partially agree with this issue.
