

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? If people have the opportunity to get a secure job, they should take it right away rather than wait for a job that would be more satisfying.

Finding a suitable job is one of the most crucial responsibilities that we have as adults. Because we spend most of our time at our jobs, it could have so many consequences in other aspects of our lives. I think in order to take a job you should consider all aspects of your option, but for me, having a satisfying job is much more important than having a secure one. So, I am completely against this statement, and I will posit/cite two reasons for support.

To begin with, you spend most of your time in your workplace. Think about how devastating it could ~~it~~-be, to do something that you are not satisfied with. It could have numerous effects on the physical and mental aspects of your daily life. I remember the time that I was doing my first job, which was totally unrelated to my interest, and it caused too many pains for me. Although my income was great, it ~~did~~-was not worth that many pressures. So, I took advice from one of my friends, and I quit that ~~x~~job for another ~~job~~ that I was more satisfied with. However, that my new job had less income in comparison with the my previous-one~~job~~, it made me feel more confident and satisfied with my life.

Secondly, the success rate among people who do a job that they enjoy ~~from~~ is vividly higher. It is explainable by considering how people's productivity and focus could increase when they are doing something that they enjoy. In fact, people with little backgrounds and skills, ~~which-who~~ are enjoying what they are doing, could have a better result than those people who are not interested ~~in one~~-their job. Besides, people ~~who~~-satisfied with their job tend to be more loyal, because their job looks like a pleasant activity to them, which makes them choose it even when they have a tempting job offer.

To conclude, our job is ~~just~~-an important part of our life, so we have to choose it wisely. Of course, having a secure job is quite important, but the fact that you should enjoy what you are doing is a more important factor.
