When a country develops its technology, the traditional skills and ways of life die out. It is pointless to try and keep them alive. To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

To think about the choices that our ancestors made is pointless because we are not them nor did they had have our knowledge at the time. They did what they did based on their knowledge and frankly they did great. To say goodbye to the traditional skills and to start a new area was not easy.

When the better comes, the good will have no reason to stay .The path that the mankind will choose shall be the best one by their overall wisdom.as an example, using machines instead of humans years ago has also had a significant effect of on our life today .There is no arguement that it was a better decision to make at the time, so despite the fact that nowadays we ruined are ruining the environment that we live in, there is hope that someday we could right the wrongs thanks to the technology that we have.

Today the story of human species is somehow tied with the advancements that the machines and computers brought to us, thanks to them now we think as we think and live as we live and dream as we dream.

And the end of the bookday, I would like to say that now is our term turn to make history by just correcting the path that has been started by our great grand fathers .
