

Some people believe that unpaid community service should be a compulsory part of high school programs (for example working for a charity, improving the neighborhoods or teaching sports to younger children).

To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Recently some new means are have been added in the education system to develop the quality of teaching and also motivating students by being a member of community groups to share unpaid labor which would prepare them for their professional situations of incoming years.

Education plays a vital role in people's life from their since they are as a childhood. Although children are greatly affected by their parents, the learning environment cannot be exempted which usually consists of their useful time, so their character and behaviors are influenced while they are being taught. Therefore, planning such effective methods or schedules of voluntary jobs not only boost teenager's knowledge but also could shape their personality by getting them involved in some social services. Generally, their sense of responsibility and confidence improve significantly when they are considered to-for collecting litter or training their practical skills to others or even running local charities which unconsciously will increase their awareness of the value of social behaving.

On the other hand, some people believe that these unpaid jobs lead their children to the trouble or waste their time which should be devoted to only studying especially when they are regarded as a law. For instance, some terrible experiences have concerned parents like car accidents happen when a minor is removing rubbish or losing accumulated money in charities by some thieves. However, there have been taken some efficient initiatives taken over the years such as gathering learners and encouraging them to work as a team along with a guide or limiting their activities. Also, unpaid works can be assumed as a punishment when the youth deserve it.

In conclusion, the advantages of mandatory community service in schools outweigh any disadvantages associated with it. It can be a creative approach of to developing the quality of educating as well as achieving personal gains for students.
