

Some people argue that it is best to accept a bad situation, such as unsatisfactory job or shortage of money. Others believe that it is better to try and improve such situations.

Discuss both views and give your opinion.

Facing problematic circumstances in life happens to everyone and it is an important issue how to deal with it. Some people believe that the best way is to embrace these situations while others believe that they must make a serious attempt to remedy the situation.

Many people desire stability and dislike breaks in their routine, so they prefer complacency. There is some reason why they are-do not intending to change their conditions. Firstly, they believe change is threatening and will encounter them with more difficulties and obsessions. For instance, career change is often accompanied by insecurity and there is no complete certainty to find a better job which leads to make-making their financial status worse and lose-losing their confidence. Therefore, always they are being afraid if the worst comes to the worst. Secondly, there are some realities which are unalterable and you have to accept them such as the death of someone you love /loved ones.

In contrast, some people claim it is necessary to overcome the apathy of defeatism and do-not curb their enthusiasm. They always look at failing as a learning experience, take a positive approach and make sure that gave-they give their best shot to it. In addition, they analyze the situation and try to find the most convenient solution to make it better. there exist a huge number of examples where well-known people prospered just because they did not accept the difficult circumstances they found themselves in. recently I saw a documentary about Cristiano Ronaldo on television that was so impressive. He explained how terrible a life he had such as a drunken father and dire economic situation but he achieved success because did not accept his life bad circumstances and did all his best.

All in all, almost everyone faces unpleasant situations in their lives, and the way we choose to contend with them should not always be the same. We should make a strenuous effort to alter conditions, and only when the-attempt is fruitless should we accept them and succumbing to the unsatisfactory state of affairs.
