

Nowadays many people choose to be self-employed, rather than to work for a company or organization.

Why might this be the case?

What could be the disadvantages of being self-employed?

The reasons why individuals might choose to become self-employed are ~~since~~ because of some underlying motivations. They might include, for example, the need for independence, for status or pecuniary advantages. However, self-employment may come across as a double-edged sword that might have disadvantages too.

Human motivations for opting to start their own job ~~are~~ differing from each other. Indeed, self-employment can be classified into two types; those who have entered voluntarily for reasons such as flexible work hours, independence, job satisfaction and or anticipated higher incomes, ~~and~~ and those that have been pushed into self-~~employed~~ employment because of the absence of any other attractive alternative or external forces, such as layoff and a subsequent lack of available paid employment work.

~~However~~ although most of the people tend to start their businesses, it is essential that they ~~considered~~ its drawbacks. Firstly, establishing own business involves some inevitable ventures and responsibilities, perhaps the riskiest aspect of self-employed is the lack of financial security when persons have a conventional job they are assured about the amount of money earning month by month whilst in self-employed, the income stream may fluctuate through the year. Besides, they ~~loss~~ lose all the employees' paid financial benefits such as medical and retirement insurance. Secondly, going into a new business might change their lifestyle and relationships because in starting a new business they have to dedicate more hours and working hard so there is no spare time to spend with families and friends which ~~it~~ leads to isolation.

To recapitulate, although everybody is ~~tempteds~~ to ~~has~~ have their own job to follow their dreams or enjoy more freedom and independence in their career they should consider its disadvantages and ~~do~~ not make a wrong decision because it leads to dramatic difficulties that may change their life.
