

Some people think government is wasting money on the arts and that this money could be better spent elsewhere.

To what extent do you agree with this statement?

Whether art and artists should receive government funding aids has always been a topic of discussion. Some people think that instead of wasting money on arts, Government should allocate its fund for the betterment of other sectors such a science, technology and business. In my opinion art is also as important as other sectors are and should receive government support.

Although, arts are not as beneficial as other sectors like technology, defense and business studies are, but it has substantial impact on human life as well as ~~contributes~~ contributing to the country's economic growth. Artists who are involved in artistic works are taking moving the nation's cultural legacy forward which is unique and is considered at the identity of any nation. The Face of any national is created by artists including architectural monuments, old buildings, foods, and music. People from different nations travel to the world to study or understand about other countries and one of the major things which attracts them towards any nation is contributed by arts. Therefore, arts can create jobs, tourism and can contribute to a country's growth.

However, spending money on other sectors such as science, defense, education and health sector is more important as these sectors have direct and quick impact on a country. Hence, basic sciences should be focused more by government but arts like music, painting, drama, movies also support the human life as well as a nation equally. When busy life makes people tired or bored, they always find artistic hobbies as an example watching a movie, visiting ancient monuments, listening to music as a stress reliever.

To conclude, government should always allocate/allot funds as required for all sectors instead of ignoring one above another the other as every sector has its own contribution to human life as well a country's growth.
