

Some people believe that it is better to get advice from old people compared to young people. Do you agree or disagree with this statement? Give your opinion and include relevant examples.

Nowadays in the present century, since the people's lifestyle has been changed significantly and they have become involved in sophisticated situations, the demand of consulting a true person about various events has been increased considerably. Also, it is controversial as to whether either the elderly or young adults are more sensible to receive advice from.

Generally, over the years our seniors have not only lived through extensive experiences that many of youngsters can only imagine, but also encounter tough situations such as disease, failure and loss. Therefore, they gradually achieved awareness and consciousness to resolve them and because of their unique perspective on limited previous occasions, their sage advice when they precisely listen to speakers can be more efficient than that of the new generation. On the other hand, by their conventional wisdom which usually is based on people's identity and offers up images of fulfilling life as well as reinforcing the value of culture, the youth of today can manage to make conscious and deliberate decisions about their own scripts for happiness.

However, many of the young feel more comfortable when they turn to their peers' advice because they have some common point in thinking and also are more aware of modern life and its difficulties combined with the latest technology in comparison with the elderly who are more conservative and old-fashioned. In addition, maybe they cannot realize all aspects of the advanced era and their advice and opinion could be irrelevant occasionally, although because of young adults' insufficient experience through the life their advice could not be effective all the time.

In conclusion, the accumulated wisdom of older people can serve as a helpful guide for them, hence the importance of their experiential knowledge of diverse issues that a human being can go through. Thus, their recommendations often help the youth pave the way for having a more rewarding~~wonderful~~ life.
