going to work, People want to earn money, but it is important to get great satisfaction from their job because they spend more time in at working. Better life the same as happiness not only ensues from a money maker position but also needs an enjoyable occupation.

On the one hand, it is undeniable, working for money, people want to manage their life'slives, nobody likes to depends upon families-others for a daily expenditures, and every one has a strong ambition to be onenjoy welfare. That is why a job with sufficient revenue plays an inevitable role in the-life and equating wealth with success, most people believe that if they have a finance-financial means/ability as a result of well paid job, they will have a suitable life.

On the other hand, task roles, and how public opinion thinks/feels about that is very important. For instance, teachers enjoy their position and have a high respect in societies and because of that they enjoy their position and life in spite of less revenue. Moreover, people like to work in a reputed company in comparison to a small firms. Working in those well known companies is a status symbol/source of pride/brand and employees think they are effective and have special talents/capability because of working in those companies.

In addition, the office environment and the relation among colleagues and between the manger and the employees are very effective in the work satisfactions. In friendly environments employees feel an enjoyable sense and they are satisfied by that. For example I resigned from my position ten years ago, because I had find found that there was not a suitable and friendly situation.

To sum up, I believe, that though, money making is an one of the important aspects of job satisfaction, others points are important and we can not ignore them. Enjoyable jobs are not only related to a good salary, but also it depends on social aspects of themjob.
