

Successful sports professionals can earn a great deal more than people in other important professions. Some people think this is fully justified while others think it is unfair.

Nowadays, ~~the issue of the~~ huge revenues of sports' superstars is a contentious issue, supporters think they are entitled to this ~~revenue-income~~ because of their skills; conversely, sceptics believe difference in the income among sport players and other significant groups of careers ~~are is~~ not fair.

On the one hand, some groups think the high amounts of payments to superstars has negative effects. For one, other effective groups in ~~the~~ society such as teachers, medicine groups and doctors not only do not get as equal amounts but also they are paid too small in contrast to ~~which-what isare~~ paid to ~~athleticsathletes~~, and this is an instance of miscarriage of justice. For another, they think professional sports activities are ~~a~~ kind of entertainments, not vital for ~~the~~ common, and if professional sports teams invest a portion of those amounts which are paid to players in the sport infrastructures of ~~the~~ society, it can be more useful for ~~individual's-individuals'~~ health.

On the other hand, playing as ~~a~~-professional, sportsmen have special abilities, ~~separated-separating~~ them from other people, which ensues from their talents and exhausting vigorous training. For example, Lionel Messi who is ~~the-a~~ famous football player in the world has abilities, genius as well as skills in the playing. That is why football clubs are paying enormous ~~salary-salaries~~ to him. Moreover, great honors for public were occasioned by sport victories in the international tournaments such as Olympic and world cup. This ~~vanity-pride~~ is very important and valuable for society. For instance in my country every time we win a victory in the Olympics we celebrate ~~it~~ which in turn results ~~in~~ Iranian pride.

To sum up, to my mind, though disproportionate amounts of money are paid to professional players, we cannot compare them with other groups and ~~carriers-careers~~ because of their talents, skills as well as their awards in the international games.
