

In the early 21st century, many cities are being rapidly redeveloped. In this process, the needs of special interest groups such as people with physical disabilities, are sometimes taking into account. Sabaitc.com کارگاههای writing fri

How can society improve conditions for people with physical disabilities?

The disabled encounter many insurmountable stumbling blocks during their life in comparison with other citizens. Without special care and consideration, they will be eliminated from the workforce and consequently the whole society. Many a step could be taken to alleviate the situation for these individuals and among all of them provision of education facilities, job opportunities and financial aids is of paramount significance.

First and foremost, physically disabled individuals, by and large, require special training facilities. Provision of well-equipped schools runing by well-qualified teachers is incumbent upon the education system, albeit with-at high costs. There are-is lots of especially designed equipment helping disabled individuals to learn such as computers converting text to voice for the visually impaired. Moreover, their curriculums shall be tailored to meet their needs to enter the workforce and secure a job, thereby preparing them to take pleasure from-in their productivity and independency.

Secondly, that disabled job seekers are deprived of having an equal opportunity for recruiting is an undeniable fact. Not only should officials create jobs for these prospective employees, but also they should encourage company managers to recruit them by offering them financial incentives such as tax rebates, thus increasing the disabled job prospects. For example, Firooz is a well-known factory in Iran which has earned a good reputation for their managers' positive attitude to choose-choosing their workers from physically disabled applicants. Finally, some physical impairments prevent people to-from performing jobs. Taking the outrageously expensive costs of their special facilities such as wheelchairs and hearing aids into account, the government should provide a safety net by offering them financial assistance, otherwise they are condemned to a life of poverty.

In conclusion, many a measure could be taken in order to improve the situation for people with physical disability to maintain their standards of living/self-esteem. The responsibility of introducing schemes such as providing financial support, adequate educational services and equal employment opportunities lies with the state.