

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement?

The government should spend more money on improving access to the Internet than on public transportation.

Modern societies, nowadays, face enormous desires necessitating the governments to allot specific budgets to them. Due to the limited funds ~~possessing-in possession of~~ the governments, it is crucial to determine the vitality of each area and the amount of money allocating to various activities. In this regard, there is no consensus ~~as to~~ whether the public transportation or internet access is more essential. Although some believe the public vehicles are more important because of the traffic jams especially in the metropolitan cities, I see the internet accessibility more crucial. Among countless reasons which can support my idea, in the following paragraphs, I will delve into the most conspicuous ones.

First and foremost, in this age and era, the utilization of the internet not only in our daily life, but also in business and marketing has increased far more than before. You can see new apps and online businesses starting up every single day paving the way for more economical boom and providing the platform to attract more consumers by online advertising. Furthermore, the majority of people are eager to shop online rather than in person; it is more convenient and time-saving. The increase of online businesses is conducive to less demand for public transportation, because most of the people turn to online shopping.

The far-reaching usage of ~~the~~ internet is not limited to shopping, but also the variety of daily activities are dependent on internet connections. The day begins with notifications and you check your E-mails or WhatsApp messages before you wake up. The internet is ubiquitous in our life and we are exploiting it every moment even for negligible and subtle activities such as checking the weather, finding our way via GPS, downloading the new podcast or dating ~~with-~~ our friends. It has made our life so much easier, now you can handle the problems with just one click. As a result, the tremendous role of ~~the~~ internet in ~~the~~ current century is undeniable.

To sum up, the present age is in conjunction with the technology and speed and people can efficiently access ~~to-the~~ internet if the governments allocate more money to ~~improve-improving~~ it. The internet is the indisputable part in our life and is a decisive factor in growth of societies.

