

In some countries, owning a home rather than renting one is very important for people. Why might this be the case?

Do you think this is a positive or negative situation?

In some countries people tend to attain their own home rather than renting it. Mainly, there are two reasons for this phenomenon which I will explore them in the following.

First and foremost, in some countries with prices rising every day, life is becoming very hard. the inflation rate is high in some areas, leading to some expenses that you cannot plan for. as a result, people cannot have everything planned down to the penny. Some landlords charge exorbitant rents so no sooner ~~had~~ have newly-married couples ~~maintaining~~ maintained a job than they have to ~~renting~~ an expensive flat. It could be a burden on the shoulder to face other things like recurring bills and needing ~~an~~ unprecedented, expensive repairs, which hangs over them and necessitates maintaining a full-time job, ~~Thereby~~ thereby getting harder and harder to pass up little treats like a movie or a dinner out because ~~there's~~ there is no money in the budget. As a result, people are seeking ~~logging for finding~~ their own home to be safe than sorry.

Looking at the other side, psychological factors play an important role in the tendency to purchase a home. natural human desire for security and prestige ~~is~~ is a breeding ground for ~~settle~~ settling down. This fact is considered innately desirable for not only humans, but also many other animals. There is a raft of research showing that people feel safe when they have their own property.

In conclusion, it is incumbent upon governors to build up an economy based on productivity not accumulation of assets. I strongly believe that the main concern for families shouldn't be having a house because sooner or later it stops them ~~to~~ flourishing in their abilities and talents because their main concern is to find a flat to live a long life in ~~it~~.
