

One of the most serious problems that cities now face is crime. What are the most effective measures to tackle crime in urban areas?

The worrying concern of the crime rate now is becoming a nightmare for authority figures. Crime is one of the most important issues that cities are struggling with nowadays. Some approaches ~~on to tackling~~ this issue will be discussed here, ~~and~~ then reasons why ~~authorities other experts~~ have another idea will be explained and finally the writer's view about the most effective approaches will be evaluated.

To begin with, governments should improve their cities' security by recruiting more officers and also enhance their equipment in order to decrease ~~the~~ crime rate. For instance, it has been proven that security cameras can help prevent crimes. Furthermore, police presence can be an effective action. Having more police patrols can discourage criminals from committing crimes.

On the other hand, authorities with knowledge of aforementioned approaches, when it comes to ~~the~~ crime rate, have another idea. From experience they point to the fact that the most effective factor ~~to in~~ ~~reduce-reducing~~ the crime rate is education. ~~Moreover,~~ surveys show that a considerable proportion of criminals commit crimes given their financial problems or their lack of proper education. Therefore, governments recommend allocation of ~~the~~ budget to infrastructures wherein individuals are ~~deprived-~~ ~~presented of with~~ an adequate healthy environment.

The writer believes, providing proper education for individuals is more likely to be the most effective approach, while different approaches might be considered in various countries. Therefore, considering various situations in different places, governments should choose the best options for their cities.

In conclusion, although different factors such as security and police forces have their own impacts on crime rates, providing education for individuals appears to be an incredibly effective measure.