Nowadays, lifestyle has been improved .With globalization and progress in tourism field ,people's demands on visiting overseas are going up day by day .They tend to visit other countries for different purposes such as business ,medical treatment and higher degree for university .Some people believe visitors should obey local customs and traditions .Others feel the host country should be hospitable and respect cultural differences of travelers.

Also,some people agree that visitors should respect the host country's regulations and customs .Not only do they confirm traveling can ease their mind ,but they also gain very valuable experiences about new cultures and expand their skills.Travellers also achieve lost-lots of new comprehensive things-info and get into new traditions .These items would give them the better perspective of life .In my country ,I have observed many people who were fascinated by testing new cuisines and visiting some spectulare sightseeings .

On the other hands ,there are some various aspects agains this argument .Some people feel the host country should relax the rules and allow visitors to behave as they want . This way would bring some benefits for local people .Meanwhile ,they are confident which-that it's really hard for people to adapt to new customs .In addition,local people can experience new things from travelers and make money to improve the country's facilities . Also, travelers are willing to visit the country again providing the host country would be hospitable. There is + must => there must be

In conclusion ,I personally think these both attitudes are decent .Indeed,it- there must be a balance between locals and visitors towards this approach .Both need to tolerate cultural diversities and overwhelming differences .Nobody is not authorized to humiliate others due to cultural variations.
