

Some people think that the best way to increase road safety is to increase the minimum legal age for driving cars or riding motorbikes. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Some individuals believe that rising the minimum legal age for driving cars and motorbikes is the most effective solution of increasing the road safety. I somewhat agree with this opinion but I believe there are other solutions for this issue.

It might be a beneficial idea to increase the minimum age for driving because of some reason. Firstly, younger people are usually less responsible with their manners and they are more careless about following rules and do not following rules is one of the main reason of accident and they are less mature to understand what the consequences of accident are. Secondly, older people can control the cars or motorbikes better because of their experience and they can react faster to prevent the accident.

However, there are different solution for this issue. For instance, firstly the government should try to improve the road condition they should repair the road every few years because the road are exposed by sun and sun have a destructive effect on road. Secondly, driving policy should be more serious about rules and they should specify some heavy penalty for those who disobey the rules . and parents and adult should learn their children from the beginning they should respect rules and obey them to keep themselves and other safe from any accident . also there is an other way too that is driving policy get harder exam from those who wants to get their driving license.

In conclusion, we should not deprived the young people from driving cars or motorbikes we should just increase the age and try to get other condition better than past to decrease the number of accident.
