

Young people in the modern world seem to have more power and influence than any previous young generation. Why is this the case? What impact does this have on the relationship between old and young people?

I agree that ~~nowadays-today's~~ young generations are more powerful than their elder generations. The main reason lies in the fact that/would be the technological improvement in our lifestyles. These quick changes can lead to differences even in every decade. Today children have higher education in comparison of their parents. For instance, mostly all of the children have to spend school educations and with rising living standards that have ~~by the level up that has~~ happened ~~to in~~ our lifestyles, they have to continue their education for having better achievements in the future.

We all learn to work with computers, smart TV's, Smart phones which covers our whole life nowadays and gain whatever information we are looking for just by a click on the internet which ~~it was~~/would be unimaginable for earlier generations.

This means that, we are much more informed than our parents are or even grandparents were at our ages. Our confidence has risen/ been elevated deeply with the rapid changes in technology but this would be ~~so~~-extremely uncomfortable for older people.

In addition, young generations can be connected with the entire world and most of them are globally related, by a quick search on the google. For instance, they are all aware of the news, politics, fashions, weather or whatever it's up to date.

Although there are many applicable things to point out about the young ~~people~~ generation, in many cultures, this ~~had~~-has led to lack of proper behavior in schools, family breakdowns and even serious social problems.

However, the current generation's main gap is how to make /strike/maintain a balance between older generations and young generations, the easiest way is to try to understand each other and keep ~~their-~~ selves~~themselves~~ up to date with the newest news and technologies and the best point for start can be between families to spend more time tighter-together and ~~exchanging~~ exchange their thoughts and feelings ~~mentality~~ with each other.
