

Nowadays, more and more older people who need employment compete with the younger people for the same jobs. What problems this causes? What are solutions?

There is a rat race between the youth and the elderly to secure job opportunities in this day and age. As it is the case, I will investigate the ins and outs of this issue and some feasible solutions will be submitted.

On the one hand, due to cut-throat competition among aged people and young ones, the prospect of obtaining job recruitment by seniors will fall to the extent that they could not be on the same footing as adolescents ~~because~~. ~~Because~~ younger adults are more likely to have more and superior credentials with respect to certificate, bilingualism, and other scopes ~~pertained~~ pertaining to technology information. Hence, employers would rather opt for junior individuals bringing joblessness in its train for senior ones, ~~consequently~~. ~~Consequently~~ leading them into committing a crime, as they are likely to have a family to support, and they may not have an adequate income to provide the bare necessities of their families.

On the other hand, several steps should be taken by the authorities and governments worldwide. For instance, ~~did if~~ they diminish the minimal age for retirement, and ~~did~~ they scale up the ~~elderly~~ s'elderlies' state pension, older individuals would will not compete with others, that is to say, the youth for job employments. Last but not least, for rivalry on the same scale, and should the need arise, governors could ~~make offer~~ some courses for free of charge concerning older adults to make them ~~qualify-qualified them~~ to achieve jobs either at a premium level or with a high stipend.

To conclude, only when aging persons /individuals are not going to compete with younger ones are their ~~bore~~ necessities be provided or the respective competition taking place in the same circumstances in terms of knowledge and ability within two age groups provided that the governmental authorities constitute free centers for the elderly.
