

Today children are spending much more time watching TV compared to the past. Why do you think this happens? Is this a positive or a negative change?

Over recent decades, television's viewers have been growing up, particularly fresh minds. There are numerous causes for why children are fascinated by this magical box. Beyond question, this trend could bring more main-positive points for their spectators/viewers or its drawbacks outweighed them?

Admittedly, technological breakthroughs have changed the way adolescents being-are fascinated and not only does television introduce a broad range of programs persuading plenty of children to spend their time on it but also, diverse programs are readily available for them in order to acquire/learn from. In other words, what any type of a movie or program could be found anytime anywhere as opposed to the previous time; hence, the number of youngsters spending their time on TV are-is increasing substantially. Moreover, thanks to state-of-the-art gadgets the production process of a movie or animation has been boosted considerably, and there are also highly attractive. According to recent surveys, the production volume in the field of cinema has grown, and advertisements also play a crucial role in persuasion of people to watch more. A number of students were absent/the number of the students was 15.

This trend has had more negative effect on youngsters which means that more time spent watching TV adversely affects the mental and physical well-being of Recent studies show that the obesity rates have been rising dramatically over the recent two decades among children; it also could cause further problems in their future such as depression due to lack of face-to-face communication with their peers and even anxiety. Having said this, however, the TV could also be regarded as an educational tool by which plenty of academic subjects are found easily; consequently, the minds are trained by fully proper information and knowledge.

In conclusion, advances in technology result in more time spending-spent in front of the television which could be more harmful unless we regulate/as long as we do not regulate the use of it. It is incumbent upon parents to control the time and proper programs which their children use.