

One of the best ways that parents can help their teenage children prepare for adult life is to encourage them take a part-time job.

Teenage years are one of the most challenging stages in human development. It is a course in which several important features of personality are shaped, expectations for adulthood are adjusted and the ability to take responses is created. Parents play a vital role in preparing teenagers for their upcoming adult life by encouraging their children to take a part-time job. This can be helpful in many ways which I will be discussing in the following essay.

Firstly, adult life is all about taking responsibility and accepting the consequences of your actions. This is a prominent aspect of this course of life and taking part-time jobs from early days in teenagerhood, can build up these abilities.

In the second place, a part-time job is a great source for teenagers to make social interaction. During teenage years, peers and friends are the most influential persons. These jobs can make offer this opportunity for them to bond, for instance, with other teenagers who work at the same place and learn a great deal/many things from each other.

Equally important, the value of money can be learned. Teenagers by taking part-time jobs can understand that money is a valuable thing-asset and therefore it should not be spent carelessly. I believe that this is an enormous step that should be obtained before stepping into adulthood. As an illustration, a teenager who works hard in a month and paid a certain amount of money, realizes that money does not grow on trees/come from nowhere, you should work hard to get that and therefore it should be valued.

In addition to what is mentioned above, it is of note to say that parents, before assigning their children ~~for~~ a job, should be aware of the job's requirements and the teenager's capabilities. Putting a teenager for example in a situation which he/ she is totally unfamiliar with, can cause more damage than goods. Although she was aware, she did the job.

In conclusion, taking a part-time job is a good practice for teenagers to be prepared for their adult life. Therefore, parents should encourage them to do so.
