

Some people believe that university students should be required to attend classes. Other believe that going to classes should be optional for students. Which point of view do you agree with?

Educationally speaking, although a group of people claim that university students need to attend ~~compulsory~~ classes, I strongly agree with those who hold that it is more beneficial when students have an option to choose whether attending a class is more useful to them ~~necessary~~ or not.

The idea of attending classes optionally brings s about some benefits through academic life for each student. Firstly, they are free to choose which class is their field of interest, so they can join, otherwise they may lose a considerable amount of their precious time ~~on~~ participating in classes which they do not enjoy and learn from efficiently. It is completely essential for university students to be expert in a particular field of study in order to invest their knowledge ~~on~~ in their future career. The students who are poor in learning sophisticated subjects, instead of wasting their time on easier topics, may have more time to work on the harder ones. Another justification, showing the importance of optional attendance for students is that, international students can work the hours that they are required to be present for learning some convenient subjects; hence, they can make money to accommodate their basic needs s in a foreign country.

Another group of people believe that the idea of making classes optional at universities is wrong. In the first place, the youth ~~generation~~ need to learn disciplines which may come true when there are some strict rules in term of classes' attendance. How to be organized and make arrange/establish a schedule for the period of academic life, may also help them to be well-organized for the rest of their lives. On the other hand, some credits are a prerequisite for other ones (which are) called major credits. Students have to learn and pass those subjects to be able to choose major credits making students professional and leading them to ~~be~~ graduated from their field of interest.

To conclude, there are different views in making university classes optional or compulsory, as it is now. While some people ~~convey~~ argue it is impossible, I think there are many ways that students can have the opportunity to choose ~~that~~ which class is essential or not. Universities can provide some visual aids for those who prefer not to attend some classes. Also, students can have self-study but if they face some difficulties or if something goes wrong, they can ask ~~the~~ from professor ~~of~~ about that subject via email or even in person. I know that why you hate me I know that when you criticize me you want to say sth.
