Nowadays families move to different countries for work. Some people think it has a negative effect on children, while others disagree. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

After the revolution in technology, providing a unique situation has been provided in which people have more opportunities to experience living in other countries for various purposes, particularly find a job. Whereas many subscribe to the belief that immigrant children may experience difficulties that have a psychological impact on them, others argue the positive effects are substantial.

Admittedly, relocating to other places means that considerable changes may occur. Initially, children generally encounter plenty of unfamiliar situations that may contribute to insecurity which means that they are constantly in fear of losing something in their minds. For instance, when a child moves to a new place, he should leave their his old friends, and startingmaking a new circle of ones. Moreover, their patriotic feeling and sense of belonging to their country could weaken since they miss a lot of opportunities to celebrate their national events.

There is a deluge of merits of moving to different nations countries for adolescents; the most significant one is that a new language could be quickly acquired by constant exposure in an environment. In other words, grammar, vocabulary, and structure easily are conveyed to children from new places and individuals. Furthermore, children have a chance to expand their knowledge about varied cultures, the way people think, and life; as a result, this unparalleled condition may result in the intellectual ability to evaluation evaluate alien situations. The latest surveys indicate that many successful people are capable of making decisions in tough situations.

In conclusion, in my view living in a different country positively affects children in all aspects. Obtaining new languages and being an open-minded and faster decision maker are just few examples of many possible benefits.
