

People benefit more from travelling in their own country than travelling to foreign countries.

Travelling broadens one's perspective towards the world. It adjusts desires with reality and confronts individuals with the other ways of living. From ancient times, people were encouraged to travel, not only within their home country but also the unseen foreign countries. However, some people believe that spending time exploring their country would be more beneficial. I personally go for the second which is travelling to foreign countries for the below mentioned reasons.

From my point of view, travelling to foreign countries can give you the opportunity to experience the culture which cannot be found in your home country. People who are living in the same district tend to have common thoughts and approaches towards the world. Confronting ~~with~~ a new culture is a great source to expand one's outlook. For instance, a person coming from an industrialized country can find his or her meaning of life in a less modern eastern country with a rich culture. He or she may find this new culture full of happiness which is may be rare in his or her country with all the ~~emphasize-emphasis~~ on money.

In addition, each region has its unique natural reservoirs and scenic landscapes. By only travelling within domestic regions, we are missing the chance of realizing the true beauty of Earth. Imagine ~~if~~ ~~Markopoulos-marco polo~~ refused to go for the unseen world and explore beyond his comfort zone. How many beauties ~~What a beauty~~ would have ~~been~~ remained undiscovered.

In summation, I strongly believe that people should consider travelling to foreign countries due to the importance of experiencing new cultures which can broaden their perspective and also ~~to~~ enjoy the beautiful natural scenes that cannot be seen in their home countries. I ~~am'm~~ looking forward to witnessing ing a new era in which where travelling to foreign countries would be embraced warmly ~~with~~ by people and facilitated specially for my home country.