

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? In order to succeed in doing a new job, the ability to adapt oneself to the new environment is more important than the excellent knowledge of this job.

Hardly ever can anyone call into question the significant role of the environment in people's life especially when talking about the workplace. The questions ~~arises~~ as to whether having outstanding information of the new job can be more effective for people or adapting/adjust to this environment. I wholeheartedly adhere to this belief that being able to acclimatize to new situations has a more critical effect on people's life for a couple of reasons which I will illustrate at ~~the~~ length in the subsequent paragraphs.

The first and most obvious, communication is one of the striking parts of each job regardless of having an appropriate data of that. In other words, communicating with others is a kind of adapting to the environment which releases stress and anxiety. For instance, a person who has a better ability to communicate with other people not only has more job opportunities but also he is able to have (he has the able ability to have) more coworkers, so he is more ~~satisfy~~ satisfied of with his job. Therefore, it goes without saying that adapting ~~with to~~ a new condition especially at work can ~~reach help~~ people ~~reacht~~ happiness and satisfaction.

Another aspect to consider is that although having an excellent knowledge of a job is a crucial matter, without adapting to the condition is futile. In apposite words, fundamentally people cannot use their skills and awareness where they are not comfortable or do not get accustomed, so clients or other colleagues do not count on them to do the job for them which ~~causes hurts decreasing~~ (their) confidence. Besides, in my opinion if we do not adapt ourselves to new environments, we cannot concentrate on our abilities and knowledge, so the risk of failure increases. The best example is, a person who has just migrated where the culture, language and customs are different with those of his country if he does not adapt himself to the new circumstance, he will definitely be helplesshomeless and gets depressed.

To recap, even though some people believe that the benefits of having an excellent knowledge of a new job greatly ~~than~~ outweigh those of adapting to that environment, I strongly believe otherwise maintaining that this mind set is nothing but a narrow outlook (tunnel-vision) which overlooks the abovementioned facts.