

Young people nowadays do not give enough time to helping their communities. Agree/ Disagree

The Community is the paramount and the broadest group which we are part of it. Solid society can improve the power of the country; therefore, helping our society is indispensable for advances in all levels. Some people believe that nowadays young men do not give enough time to help their communities. Nevertheless, I believe that young people are effectively helping their society but not in a similar manner people ~~do did~~ in the past. as in this era young people are vigorously engaged with the university I firmly feel that Young people are helping their society in three ways:

At first, they have access to the impressive knowledge which is essential for producing goods which has outstanding quality based d on people's needs. For instance, a conscientious young man who allocates s a long time to studying ing in university can produce higher quality goods which are distributed in the country. So this young man is helping his people by giving amazing products to them.

Second of all, young people with a wide range of knowledge can initiate an astonishing current of industry's improvement. An expert young man will formulate the advanced apparatuses; z thereby, z the country can reach its zenith of development. As the result of this development, the community would utilize from advances and people will live more conveniently.

The Third way that young people are helping their community is that since they dedicate their time to accomplish ing science, they obtain this potential to push knowledge forward. Because of that, z countries' literacy will ~~raise-riseup~~.

In conclusion, we can say that ~~however-although~~ it doesn't seem that young people do not give enough time for society, z ~~but~~ they have some remarkable benefits for the community including facilitating lives by producing wonderful goods, developing countries' industry, and pushing knowledge some steps forward. I hope someday governments trust young people and give them more opportunities to prove themselves.