

School teachers are more responsible for social and intellectual development of students than parents. To what extent do you agree or disagree? Echo chamber

Many people subscribe to the view that school educators play a crucial role in ~~their~~ pupils' success, whether in social life or mental improvement, compared to parents. I absolutely agree with this notion, as teachers are well-trained to transfer academic subjects to students. Aside from that, schools provide a unique situation in which young minds could socialize and expand the circle of friends.

Parents are mostly regarded as the best people to ~~bring up~~ upbringing offspring. In terms of education, however, teaching children alone does not secure a bright future for them. Due to the fact that they have insufficient knowledge about how fluently different subjects are taught whereas school teachers are educated to discern differences among their students and how to ~~flourish~~ help their pure talents flourish. Most children constantly update their knowledge in a broad range of subjects, constant evaluations help them to learn how to have a deep attitude and deal with problems. Furthermore, practical exercise and laboratory experiments might result in the ~~increase~~ expansion of the problem-solving and logical thinking. Put simply, students studying under close supervision of several professions could have an excellent chance to invest in their gifted ~~ed~~ to create by far a better future.

With regard to ~~social~~ society, ~~the~~ school not only ~~is~~ offers a wide range of facilities and educational equipment provided to ~~transmit~~ teach practical or theoretical skills but also enable ~~s~~ students as easily as possible to extend a circle of friends by communication with other pupils. Introducing extracurricular activities assist ~~s~~ the same aged ~~ed~~ children in development of social and leadership skills and teamwork. Varied sports events or competitions among students are the most tangible examples which may not be acquired at home alone.

In conclusion, I believe when it comes to academic learning and social development of young minds, mentors and schools play a more vital role in raising ~~children~~ them as they are professionally trained.