

Some parents buy their children a large number of toys to play with. What are the advantages and disadvantages for the child of having a large number of toys?

Many parents purchase plenty of playthings for their offspring. Since this has advantages and downsides together ~~so~~ it is a disputable point ~~that as to~~ whether this is a good notion or not which is discussed in this article.

On the one hand, some believe a wide range of toys are more likely to increase a child's abilities due to the fact that ~~it they~~ could help him to try a multitude of playthings. To put it clearly, not only do a variety of toys/ various toys stimulate a child's creativity and acquisition, but they also have positive physical effects on them as hand-eye coordination, color recognition, ~~etc.~~ also, toys have /provide/offer a lot of fun for children so the more toys, the more fun.

On the other hand, owning different toys may act as a deterrent for children that may spoil their creativity and concentration together. Take a child who has a wide range of options to select as an example; he is not likely to have a chance to become creative thanks to lack of restriction. It means, if children are put ~~on~~ in a tough condition, they ~~may would~~ try to use their mind and focus on any game for a decent length of time or they, sometimes, try to build handmade toys to play. On the social side, having ~~numerous a majority of~~ playthings could ~~make shape/form/create~~ this idea in children that they could have anything they seek/want without any effort ~~that which this view~~ can hurt them in the future.

These animals violate every human law which strikes me as strange.

To conclude, parents should be careful to make an informed choice about the number of toys that they provide for their offspring.