

Many criminals commit further crimes as soon as they are released from prison. What do you think are the causes of this? What effect will this have on society?

Reoffend/

Immediately after offenders obtain /win their freedom, they start to continue their crimes and it will be a continuous manner for most of them. These offenders can be divided into two groups. The first group involves the cases who do not have any outside provocations and the second one includes covers those who are affected by motivations.

The first community was born in a criminal family and had a different upbringing of from ordinary people; therefore, others are not able to understand why they have such a behavior. Maybe its reason involves/concerns/is something such as a psychic disease or even it is a hobby for them.

Except apart from those, most of the culprits have some reasons for their guilt. For instance, lack of money /poverty/destitution made some of them ~~to~~ steal, and as far as this problem exists, it will be the main excuse for them to repeat their crimes. There are many other problems and shortcomings which can cause misdeeds, such as financial, and even mental problems to name but a few. As for the ramifications, Prisons are costly for governments and after the captive period have-has finished, most of the prisoners go ahead to do what they did. Besides, the arresting process is so time consuming. So it would be a financial loss and a time wasting for the country. Furthermore this issue is harmful for society, because the number of criminals will increasingly grow up. The other peril is the criminals' influence on their family specially the children that will affect not only in this time but also on the future generations. These children are potentially the future culprits whom we mentioned in the first group.

To sum up, it seems that punishment is not the only way to save ~~the~~ society from offenders and reoffenders as well as their adverse effects, and this essay highly recommends the governments solve as many basis-basic problems as they are able to, to decrease the crime rate and save their society.
