

Some people believe that all children should have a pet or an animal to look after. Other people disagree, however, saying that this depends on a child's circumstances. Consider these opposing views, and give your own opinion.

People have different views about whether all kids should have animals and take care of them or it would be dependent on children's conditions. I suppose that it would depend on the mental condition of those who want to keep animals and also the financial state of children's families.

That some people claim, on the one hand, that children's circumstances for looking after animals could play a vital role could be supported by compelling justifications. The most outstanding features for children, who nurture animals in their home, could be the mental situation of kids and the economic condition of the families that children are born. This would mean that they should be prepared to preserve-protect/support animals and be able to create an inextricable relationship; in addition, their parents should provide enough space and food for their animals. For instance, some kids might suffer from autistic disease or they are living in a poor family, so pet owners hips may be probably faced with so many difficulties in keepingto-keep animals. With the aforesaid conditions, some cases, hence, should be considered before children start looking after animals.

However, some proponents of the animals believe that all children should consider preserving and nurturing pets in their homes. Such caring could lead to children having a peaceful mind, this is because animals are great companionship for them, although it is more likely that it takes a long time that-for domestic pets to become a good company for their owners. This relationship, in the long run, results in animals having a calm situation inasmuch as children would learn how to communicate with them and might become opponents of poaching and hunting of animals when they enter society.

Overall, concerning the debate surrounding whether all children should have pets or other cases would be noticed such as children's mental capacity and their families' financial situation. From my point of view, it would be advisable that all children have pets provided that families could support pets-them in terms of providing decent food and place.
