

Environmental problems are serious in many countries. It means that the only possible way to protect the environment is an international level. To what extent do you agree or disagree on this hypothesis?

Environmental issues have always been one of the most challenging problems among countries. In this regard, some people believe that the only effective way to preserve the environment is an international ~~of~~ cooperation. I partially agree with this viewpoint, I agree that international collaboration level should be done because in this way developed countries can help developing countries and they can gain more experience. However, we should not underestimate the role that every individual can play in this regard/~~but individuals are responsible as well as the government.~~

Admittedly, developed countries should assist developing countries by sharing experiences. This is because these countries have more knowledge, equipment and technologies and they have been in this field for a long time. For instance, in the most developed nations they use green ways alternative sources of energies such as hybrid cars or use renewable energies like wind power and solar energy in order to protect the environment. Therefore, when they cooperate together they share these vehicles and energies so international cooperation ~~have~~ has a vital role in protecting the environment.

However, people should be responsible for environmental challenges in the same way as ~~same~~ as the government. In other words, every individuals on ~~his~~ their own can save a lot of ~~energies~~ energy and help the environment. For example, employees, when they want to go to work, use public modes of transports such as the underground, the bus instead of private transport/ their own cars. Also, when individuals are at home they need to plug out appliances that are not in use like computers, washing machines or turn off extra lights. In this way they prevent environmental pollution ~~form environment~~ and save more ~~energies~~ energy. Thus, people should accept this responsibility and should not put the future of the environment in danger.

To conclude, after analyzing what has been elaborated d above, I partially agree with this viewpoint that environmental protection should be done ~~in~~ at an international level. Because in my opinion an international level do ~~es~~ not work alone, people in ~~the~~ society should be responsible about for the environmental issues. So, in this regard, both governments and individuals are ~~hoped~~ hopefully going to take certain measures in order to resolve the environmental problems.
