It is more enjoyable to have a job where you work only three days a week for long hours than to have a job work five days a week for shorter hours. Agree or disagree?

It is absolutely undeniable that jobs play a paramount role in people's life and working hours are an inseparable part of them. Some people prefer to work shorter hours more days in a week and others would rather ~~to~~ work despite the abovementioned condition, so a question arises as to that which of these circumstances can be more beneficial for individuals. Personally, I ~~opine~~ opt to choose the latter situation for some main reasons which I will explain at length in the subsequent paragraphs.

Firstly, although people who work three days of the week for longer hours would be under more pressure, they would be motivated by thinking about those ~~remainder~~ remaining free days, so they are encouraged d to tolerate this situation. Besides, these employees can spend more quality time with their families and friends. According to the some conducted research people who invest more time ~~into~~ in beloved ones not only have more stimulants/motivation for working productively but also they have less mental disorders. The best example is, people who work in compressed hours can have efficient short holidays to get rid of ~~wash down~~ all the burnout and boredom. Therefore, it goes without saying that perusing three work days in a week for long hours can have positive effect on employees' mental health.

Secondly, individuals who take only three days a week for working can find another part-time job which is conducive to earning more money, so ~~their~~ they can boost their welfare which makes them happier humans. For instance, newly married people who have a middle income level can afford their fancy goals and bring more comfort to their lives, thereby going after different occupations can achieve that end.

Moreover, these people can spend their off days on increasing their education level. For example, in my country generally people who are in the same job position but have higher education in their resume will ~~be received~~ big paychecks compared to those who do not ~~have~~. Hence, as is clear employees who work three days a week for longer hours have more chance to obtain money and ~~perusing peruse~~ higher levels of education.

To recap, on the basis of reasons (~~which were~~) mentioned above, I totally believe that working for less/~~fewer~~ days in longer hours can be more effective for people based on being motivated for working efficient~~ly~~ and having~~a~~ more opportunities to enhance their welfare.
