

C 14, test 1, task 2

Some people believe that it is best to accept a bad situation, such as an unsatisfactory job or shortage of money. Others argue that it is better to try and improve such situations.

Discuss both views and give your opinion.

A sizeable majority of people, nowadays, are facing a dilemma in which they should decide whether to accept or endeavour to amend the circumstances. Although many try to maintain the status quo, others are of the opinion that enjoying a more desirable life is an indispensable right of human beings, and beyond a shadow of doubt it is probable to be obtained by making an enormous effort. Many, myself included, advocate the latter view, supporting the need to change.

On the one hand, trying to change the unsatisfactory matters like career or financial issues is considered pointless by some groups of ~~multitudes people~~. They assert we should foster a desire for realism instead of idealism, due to the fact that our destiny had been written in advance. Hence, by trying to alter it, not only would it not be improved, but also it would be exacerbated. To illustrate, if you invest your limited amount of money ~~on-in~~ a high-risky business in hope of breeding astronomical profits, in case of failure, you are going to ~~loos-lose~~ all of your properties, resulting ~~in~~ an appalling life with an urgent necessity to start from the scratch. In stark contrast, by ~~welcoming well-coming~~ what ~~live-life~~ gives you and trying to keep it, at least you lead a less ~~streesful-stressful~~ ~~live-life~~.

However, on the other hand, it is asserted by some experts that ~~regaldless-~~ ~~regardless~~ of what ~~are-is~~ donated, it lies on our power to convert undesirable conditions by making strenuous effort. Take ~~the~~ Japan, for instance, which, following the second world war, went through a disastrous economic recession with ~~a~~ ~~the~~ collapse of all its infrastructures. By not ~~accepted-accepting~~ that, Japan's reinvigorated an otherwise ~~disastrous economy downturn~~, boosting their economy to the top in the world class.

~~japan which is located in asia has 132 million people~~

~~japan where women feel free has 132 million people~~

To ~~co~~clude, in spite of the fact that reversing improper conditions may be seem like a herculean task, I strongly consent with the second view vantage point, arguing that acquisitiveness for success as well as perseverance for the goals could make the ambitions pragmatic. In retrospect, and with the benefit of hindsight, experiences of some countries like japan, undeniably, prove it.
