

Pros and cons of cohabitation

In this today's day and age, some social stigma and relaxation around men and women have has changed. One of the changes is cohabitation before people get married. In fact in this age, moving move and living live together are is commonplace. Although it could have positive aspects, there are some drawbacks as well. I have some ideas in both sides but I think the advantages outweigh is-overweight the disadvantages

On the one hand, cohabitation could provide a proper situation for both men and women before they make extra commitment and become a married couple because they could spend more time together and have the chance to get to know their habits. There is a little room for doubt; in such circumstances for both sides there are have financial benefits. In fact all of living expenses are split among both of them whether or not they could make monetary savings. Namely there is one rent payment, or the charge for of cables will be divided between two people.

On the other hand, living together could have some disadvantages versus privileges. Cohabitation could lead to expectation of marriage and they are disappointedment if marriage married doesn't happen. Furthermore, it might cause reduction in to-reduce excitement of marriage because they will go back to the same home where they lived prior to getting married. In addition, although both partners are motivated to save money, unclear division of responsibilities leads to tremendous financial misunderstanding.

In sum-nutshell, cohabitation needs to manage a variety of factors because of the potential for of miscalculation. Whereas modern life doesn't allow a person to spend enough time knowing to-know together each other, and subsequently it can start make a family. moreover, in these days living in real life isn't as powerful as living in virtual one, so this approach might help people to make a decision for their future life and the next big step could lead to a successful marriage.

Good luck!
