

Is it better to enjoy your money when you earn it, or is it better to save your money for some time in the future? Use specific reasons and examples to support your opinion.

Probably the main reason of working for most people is earning money. From my point of view, we earn money to enjoy ~~the~~ life more. What can be more important than making more pleasant seconds of life? Who knows how many years they are is alive? And what if all the saved money ~~have~~ becomes s stolen or disappears into thin air overnight ed in one night?

To my mind, life ~~has~~ consisted of all the seconds which we should make the best of them the best. Definitely expending money could be one way to create happier and nicer moments. If the earned earning money hasn't been expended on pleasure and enjoyment, then, what would be used for? In addition, there is no guarantee of the money being useful ~~ness the money~~ which has been saved for maybe many years. Therefore, unpredictable life causes people to think more about the enjoyable seconds of the present.

Some people believe in saving money as if they would be alive forever. In other words, they prohibit themselves from enjoying money in order to save that, but, what if a person will not survive hasn't been alive until the day he has already planned to spend the deposited money. In fact, no one can foretell the future and tell what will happen to people's destination. Thus, isn't it a wiser idea to enjoy the moments?

These days we are observing so many companies that deceive people to take their money. Imagine if these dishonest companies would cheat people who have saved their money for several couple of years at the expense of having pleasure, who deprived themselves of having fun when they had earned money, who haven't worked to live, but, have lived to work. Consequently, in my opinion, they might have lost the one time chance of pleasure living.

To sum up, appreciating the moments, believing in unforeseen future, and considering the probability of losing the deposit in some unpredictable cheating that are prevalent in my country lead / cause me to prefer to enjoy my money rather than ~~to~~ save it.
