

How should we ensure that television is a positive influence in the life of children?

Today, it is important to note that TV has a growing appeal appetite for a broad range of people's ages, particularly children. An issue in dispute is how to ensure the positive impacts of TV programs on their daily lives. To me, achieving this goal needs productive plans that decrease problematic effects.

Firstly, although TV can provide kids with many much of beneficial programs, it is expected that it has unsuitable ones, too. The most cherished solution is parents who are under obligation to control what children watch on TV. Time and content of programs considerably can be considerably managed. Of course, they should enhance their awareness to be able to distinguish types and levels of schedules broadcasted on TV tv.

Furthermore, the government should recruit some informed experts on media to dominate programs of TV tv which can be divided into some categories. As a case in point, violent films have two sections including above and under 18. Besides, time of being aired propagation of them also is under control. A drawback of this is that the control of these factors will be done indirectly. In other words, some children can be stay up late and not pay along with not paying close attention to the age limit permissible type. However, if parents are more cautious this problem can be somewhat dealt with. Actually, as mentioned it is solved by parents.

Finally, tv companies can limit unsuitable programs in accordance with some criteria like moral and humanity factors. In fact, there should be some protections that are performed by high-skilled employees. However, z these companies cannot take advantage of popular movies with plenty of fans.

From the preceding discussion, children will benefit from TV provided if that all aspects related to it are controlled. With this trend, not only educational cases but fun programs are able to teach many effective items.
