

Some experts believe that it is better for children to begin learning a foreign language at primary school rather than secondary school.

Do the advantages of this outweigh the disadvantages?

Several years ago, there were basically mathematics, science and literature, which were the core subjects being included in elementary schools' curriculum. However, we have all witnessed and none can deny the recent remarkable change ~~in of~~ most primary schools' trend toward adding a foreign language to the weekly schedule. I am optimistic about such promotions to pave the way for our next generations to push back the boundaries of science more internationally.

Students in elementary schools, nowadays, have a lot of free time during school hours most of which has been allocated to remedial courses for math or other science more than needed. I argue that learning another language ~~aside from rather than~~ their mother tongue is a necessary skill to achieve. Therefore, not only could they make a use of their leisure time applicably, but it provides an apt ground for their future learning, since it is obligatory in secondary school. But maybe it will be more desirable for kids not to be obliged to do the task so the course ~~had better is entitled to~~ be optional.

The Other two profitable benefits which children are able to get from learning the language in 'elementary school' relates to both 'elementary', since it refers to early ages and 'school' by emphasizing ~~on~~ teamwork. Experts assert that if you ~~would~~ embark on learning any ~~task at an/from early age achievement you wish,~~ you could easily master it in much less time than you would in adulthood .get from your childhood, you had definitely achieve it in twice more speed than your adulthood. They cite the preference of being ~~taught taught~~ in school rather than homeschooling because of the important role which working with peers plays in affecting children more impressively in comparison with keeping in touch with parents all the time at home.

In conclusion, from my point of view, the advantages in learning any skill from early ages outweigh the disadvantages as we all confirm that 'the younger you are when you enter a course, the better you perform serve by means of efficiency'.
