Our existence and its development are influenced by our nature that we inherit from our parents and by our nurture that we ~~retrieve~~receive from the environment. These two major factors ~~are~~ affect our personal development and these factors influence each other together.

The Human instinct nature is necessary for his fetal life and after that in mundane life. Inherited characteristics of humans s lead him to a special life style. Some of our behavior and our reflections to pathogens are genetically controlled and ~~any~~none of our acquired characteristics can cannot modify them. Nature is as our inner child and you can never live without it. You can only hide it while it's controlling you.

Nurture has different effectss. It makes you better or worse. It's necessary for adaption to with the environment and each skill we combine, affect our relations to society and people around. Scientists say that the difference between our brain and other living relatives' brain, is our ability to respondse to environmental influences and organizing the experiences experiments.

Although the environment influences our functions, it can't supplant/replace human nature. Our nurture is influenced by our nature and the reverse is not true because we experience everything such that our inner child likes.

To conclude, the human's genes genetic (which are is) called nature and his nurture which is environmental experiment, are in a crucial relationship to develop the human's existence. However, nature has the major rule because of its simultaneous physical and mental effects.

Good luck!
