

Some people believe that unpaid community service should be compulsory part of high school programs (for example working for a charity, improving the neighborhood or teaching sports to younger children).

To what extent do you agree or disagree?

During the last years, inflation in the whole world has ~~been affected effected~~ people's economic ~~status.statues of people. So so~~ that/such that, some people can't afford to pay for their essential needs. For that reason communities ~~have has~~ been formed which do unpaid services in order to provide preparing these kinds of social classes' needs. Some people believe that these activities should be propounded in high schools. This assumption has some advantages which outweigh its disadvantages.

First of all, by adopting this policy at high schools we make teenagers more sociable and helping them to develop grow a sense of altruism in them. They learn how to help others without expecting any reimbursement. These activities should be commensurate with ages so they will be fanss of these tasks. For example high schoolss can set a program for students to teach younger children in any field which they are expert in for free.

Secondly, by launching unpaid community service at high schools, students learn how to manage their time accurately. Unfortunately, these days, students ~~don't are not~~ aware of after-school activities, but which this sense will be improved in teenagers by these tasks.

On the other hand, in a society where ~~goes to~~ corruption is pervasive/rampant/widespread/prevalent, it's worthy ~~adopting to adopt~~ a program for healthy activities at schools and accustom/acclimatize students with charity and unpaid tasks.

Other advantages of this assumption are spreading sports among children which can guarantee society's future with healthy children. Another one is that children will get more skills which areis essential for their future.

In conclusion, useful programs should be adopted at high schools in order to growing a sense of humanity in children and make them sociable and prepare them for future.
