

One of the consequences of improved health care is that people are living longer and life expectancy is increasing.

Do you think the advantages of this development outweigh the disadvantages?

Medical improvements in the last twenty years have cured many diseases which were killing people before. Thus, people found the chance of living more than they expected and as a result their wishes have expanded.

Proponents of recent discoveries are asserting that such findings in the field of medicine and health treatment have improved the quality of people's life as they obtained the hope of living healthier. Besides, sociologists believe that the more hale-hale and hearty(healthy) working forces attend in factories, the more qualified products people will receive. In addition, long living citizens care more about their relationships with other people knowing that they must live with friends about them many years ahead.

On the other side, some say novel medicines and treatment methods have raised the level of people's prospect and this-these great expectations needs more infrastructures and massive foundations that society cannot prepare them as the high-prospected people with over-expectations await them, and this will enforce the government to pay more and more for public needs, therefore Therefore, taxes must have increased every day meaning that as the people invoke-demand more facilities, their living expenditures will raise-rise resultantly.

In-From my point of view (From my perspective), as the people's expectancy expectation levels are boosted, up-the government and healthcare organization's obligations will be stepped up and this will prepare them for next improvements. If there were no hopefulness neither of these findings would happened. In fact, the more anticipation people have, the more discoveries will occur and no effort has been spared in response of to human-kind's(mankind's) calls. Also, as we know, the needs have always been motivations for new revealing.

As discussed, although healthcare improvements have stepped up the level of human's prospects, this increasing will encourage the men in charge to attempt more for responding to the social needs and finally that will be beneficial for whole society.
