

People attend colleges or universities for many different reasons (for example: new experiences, career preparation, increased knowledge etc.). Why do you think people attend colleges or universities?

The importance of education has been a frequent topic of discussions lately, when people found out it could has/have crucial effects on their life. People mainly get enroll/get enrolled in a collage and/or university to achieve the necessary degree either to boost their career position or enhance their knowledge.

We live in a world in which the rates of graduated people are rapidly increasing. There are a whole lot of graduated persons who are looking for proper occupation with a high income. Many people believe that achieving a great level of education leads to better job opportunities. However, sometimes it brings about over-qualification. Due to this, they face a condition of dissatisfaction after studying hard in the high rated university.

On the other hand, there could be some other reasons to attending universities .For instance, the/a vast number of people are deeply into rising/raising their level of knowledge even if it could not make/provide a suitable job for them. Furthermore, making new friends and experiencing a new situation might be some insignificant reasons which I could mention here. Unfortunately, some students are just looking for spending their leisure time by entering the university or college nowadays. It result/results in occupying others/others' chance who are worthier to have that sit/seat.

To sum up, in my opinion by all reasons that talk about/were mentioned above, the most essential reason to studding/studying hard in universities would be improvement and enhancement in career that leads to getting more revenue.
