

Some people think that all university students should study whatever they like. Others believe that they should only be allowed to study subjects that will be useful in the future, such as those related to science and technology.

Discuss both these views and give your opinion.

More and more in the last 20 years ago the number of students has ~~been~~ increased significantly, while some people assert that students must be allowed to select their courses, others oppose this view and agree that authority figures must make a decision for students' books and courses.

~~Conspicuous~~clearly/obviously, in this essay I will discuss both views and then I will give my own idea.

People who passionately endorse the first view claim that students must know everything, not only does it helps to be up-to-date but also it enhances their wisdom. They are trying to say that students are capable of choosing to choose their own way and we cannot force them to study limited books.

However, the first view undoubtedly with no doubt faces a lot of opposition by the individuals who believes that only science and technology and related books can save the students' life. by this they mean for being a specialist and finding a sufficient position in future, only related books are useful and extra books or whatever students like can be a waste of their time and take them away from their goals. Hence, it is better for students to use their time and effort reading appropriate books according to their field of study.

Should I not be influenced by taking sides, it seems that a mixture of both views can work better. I am of at the opinion that they must have some mandatoryies/(elective/required) courses and some optional ones and someone must supervise them. A some practical disinterested advice to heed is to lead lid them to their target.

To put it in a nut shell, we are all human and everyone has have the authority to choose their destination and find the best way to improve. We have the ability to offer them to find a logical way.
