

Many countries host international sport events these days. What is the positive and negative impact of hosting such events?

International sports competitions have become one of the popular events which all countries have a wish for its hosting. Nevertheless, some individuals are against that and believe that it might have a negative effect on the host country in economic and social terms.

Some argue that being an invited country is just waste of money. Firstly, authorities of host countries should spend a lot of money before and after events on constructing, repairing as well as organizing for the places where matches are supposed to be held. In addition, not only should they pay attention toabout the stadiums, but also they have to provide accommodations and necessary facilities for sportsmen and sports fans those are predicted to travel for watching the games. Furthermore, at that particular time the security of the host country is more likely to be threatened because of chaos, so the government should impose stricter control.

On the other hand, some others assert that in such events the particular country would absorb considerable attraction and popularity from all around the world, especially if they could manage the process perfectly. Besides that, it could be beneficial to most sportsmen to play in their hometown ground. It was seen that in some sports such as football players are get used to the place where they have played before. In addition, they would gain more applauding and encouragement from their fans in their countries compared with other countries in that, limited individuals have the opportunities to travel to the other countries to watch the matches. As a result, not only might they gain a sense of superiority, but also they would play more confidently which is might lead to better results.

In conclusion, although some people cite high economic impact of international events as the most important drawbacks of hosting, some others maintain that the gained popularity is more pivotal. I, myself, believe that it would be a great idea to hold the international sport events in our own country. Not only should money spending not be thought of as waste of money, but rather it would be an opportunity in which the host city's appearance would change and become more comfortable.
