

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement?

People today spend too much time on personal enjoyment –doing thing they like to do- rather than doing things they should do.

Use specific reasons and examples to support your answer.

With the advent of Industrial Age ~~the~~ mankind has been faced with a variety of new products as well as newly established matters he never dealt with or even discovered in the past two centuries. Contrary to the past, people willing to explore every aspect of issues, which were not totally realized in the past, have found, in recent decades, that they may allocate more time ~~to~~ ~~on~~ their works which they enjoy doing. ~~which was enjoyable to them~~. Thus, I personally maintain that in this age ~~the recent age~~ people like investing more time and energy ~~in~~ ~~on~~ their favorites and give up some works they should do. Such a claim may be supported under the light of the reasons expounded below.

Since the acceleration of ~~As early as the~~ technology ~~has accelerated~~, many duties in daily routines s have become specialized based on which the human being possesses more free time which can be filled with extremely various activities ~~works~~ which are more enjoyable to do for him. In the past, people typically ~~had~~ ~~have~~ to do a number of activities in order to continue their private lives many of which were obligatory including making food, cooking bread, building houses and so forth. Today as a result of specialization every member of society ~~carries~~ out just one chore in relation to his or her specialty. Hence, the public enjoy having more free time which they can spend on their favorite activities, ; and as a result they are not compelled to take every requisite measure for their personal lives since instead they retain a proportionate and yet expert person or company to do that. Therefore, , contrary to the the past, almost all the parents, for instance et, send their children to the kindergarten or school to be educated instead of teaching them themselves.

Additionally, many aspects of life in the modern age have not been discovered in the past either because they were not necessary or were ignored altogether. Literacy, for example, was not an obligationery for the whole community though the aristocracy paid special homage to being literate. Thus, in comparison to the past, people today enjoy facing a variety of activities according to which they can find their tastes and spend time on satisfying them while enjoying doing them. However, in this stream, the human being has being given up such precious activities like communicatinge with his family and spend time talking to each other intimately.

Consequently, I adhere to the view that the mankind today not only enjoys s pursuing his desired activities, but also he has been ignorant of some points in his life.
