

In the past, many people had skills such as making their own clothes and doing repairs to things in the house, in many countries, nowadays, skills like these are disappearing.

Why do you think this change is happening?

How far is this situation true in your country?

The old generations were taught many skills associated with meeting their basic needs like making garment. Whereas these days, thanks to industrialization of many countries and rapid revolutions in industry, many jobs have ~~has~~ grown specialized, hence obtaining a skill in them takes years of practice and even doing the various courses in educational centers.

These days, most of us are involved in much competition over issues such as being admitted by better universities and finding a proper job suiting our personality and skills in order to reach a more comfortable life, in which case we have to put a lot of time and energy into honing our skills and knowledge with the aim of succeeding in such rivalries. As a result, it does not seem rational to allow ~~allowing~~ time to learning some old-fashioned skills like clothes making ~~weaving clothes~~ which tend to be low-quality or repairing some devices in our home, whereas there have been many huge factories with massive financial and human resources producing a variety of goods from attire to a lot of products which are high-~~tech~~ technology with high quality and reasonable prices.

My country is moving toward industrialization and ~~much many~~ unnecessary training has faded and the majority of people prefer to assign their time and energy to other activities like ~~hardly serious~~ studying for passing ~~university entrance exams~~ ~~the entrance of universities' examination~~. Therefore, they have become more ~~dependent/dependant~~ on prepared commodities existing in the shops to satisfy their needs.

To sum up, some ~~upheavals/~~revolutions like industrialization have an enormous effect on our lifestyle and we have to adapt ~~ourselves themselves~~ to these changes every day more than before.